Boetrn. From Moore's Rural New Yorker. THE LIFE-CLOCK.

BY J. W. BARKER. What is this within my being, Ticking, ticking evermore, Like the sound of fairy footfalls Dropping on some distant shore? I can hear it in the midnight, Hear it in the busy day, Hear its clear and measured numbers

Wheresoe er I chance to stray. On that mystic little dial There are clear and telling lines, Over which the snalight glitters, And the passing hour defines. Quicker, quicker it is beating. Swifter move those mystic hands With their lean and spectral fingers

Pointing to the shadowy lands. But the day of life is waning, Soon its shadows will decline, And within my spirit's dwelling Cease the little mystic chime. Dust o'er all its motions falling, Gathers deeper day by day, Voices, from the future calling,

Seem to becken me away. Thrilling tales this clock is telling, As the days and hours recede, Noting every thought and action.

Yet we give it little heed. Sometimes we may hear it ringing, Loud and clear, the passing hour, Sending through the soul's deep chambe-Tones of deep mysterious power. Yet we fold our arms and listen To a thousand stranger sounds, While the Life-Clock, all unheeded, Plods its tireless, saleam sounds.
